Risks applicable to investment companies

Market and exchange rate movements can cause the value of an investment to fall as well as rise, and you may get back less than originally invested. We recommend you discuss any investment decisions with a financial adviser before investing. The recent dividend history is given for illustrative purposes only and future dividends are not guaranteed. Investment companies are traded on the London stock exchange, therefore the ability to buy or sell shares will be dependent on their market price, which may be at a premium or discount to the net asset value of the company.

Additional risks applicable

The investment company tends to invest in fewer companies and may therefore be more volatile than a broadly diversified one. The investment company invests in smaller companies which can exhibit higher volatility under certain market conditions. If larger numbers of sellers suddenly seek to sell a less liquid stock, this can drive down the price further than in the case of a more liquid stock. While the investment company intends to pay a progressive dividend, there is a risk that underlying companies may reduce or cut dividends altogether, meaning that this is not possible. The risk may be increased due to the concentrated nature of the holdings within the investment company.
